For Immediate Release

December 09, 2011

News Release

GOPAC Urges Parliamentarians to Join the Fight Against Corruption at GOPAC Open House on International Anti-Corruption Day

Ottawa – In honour of International Anti-Corruption Day, the Global Organization for Parliamentarians Against Corruption (GOPAC) urges parliamentarians the world over to join the fight against corruption.

“International Anti-Corruption Day is a reminder that corruption is a global issue that erodes social and economic progress,” said GOPAC Founder and CEO John Williams. “Parliamentarians around the world need to join forces to ensure governments are accountable to win the fight against corruption.”

As part of Anti-Corruption Day activities, GOPAC welcomed anti-corruption stakeholders in Ottawa to an open house at GOPAC Global Secretariat’s new office. GOPAC also took this opportunity to unveil its new website. The new site offers members and interested parties a collection of resources and tools to facilitate anti-corruption initiatives.

“The new space for the Global Secretariat and new website mark an important turning point for the organization and the beginning of a new and innovative strategy to ensure our fight against corruption is successful,” concluded Mr. Williams.

GOPAC is an international network of parliamentarians dedicated to good governance and combatting corruption throughout the world. Since its inception in 2002, it has been a leader in the fight against corruption, providing information and analysis, establishing international benchmarks and improving public awareness through a combination of global pressure and national action.

Contact:
Ann Marie Paquet
Communications Officer, GOPAC Global Secretariat
613-366-3164, ext. 304
annmarie.paquet@gopacnetwork.org